A CHEER FOR CLADSTONE

Given With a Will Yesterday by the Irish National League of Omaha.

THE OLD MAN'S WORK APPROVED

Eloquent Speeches by John M. Thurs ton and E. Rosewater-Resolutions of Endorsement and Congratulation.

Language of the League. The mass meeting of the members of the Irish National league and other citizens of Omaha, held in Cunningham hall yesterday afternoon, was well attended, notwithstanding the storm. The meeting was called to order by Mr. J. A. Mc-Shane, president of the league, who said that it seemed right and proper to assemble together to express sympathy with the brave and heroic efforts that are being made in the British parliament for the liberty of the Irish people. American sentiment publicly expressed will do much to influence England's action in regard to the adoption of home rule for Ireland.

Mr. T. J. Mahoney was chosen secre-

aft. 1. 3. Manoney was chosen secretary of the meeting in the absence of the secretary of the league.

The committee appointed to draft resolutions endorsing the home rule plan as proposed by Gladstone, reported the following:

RESOLUTIONS OF ENDORSEMENT.
Resolved, By the Irish National league of the city of Omaha and the citizens thereof, without distinction as to nationality, in general mass meeting, jointly assembled: First—That the Right Hanorable Wm. E. Gladstone merits the esteem and admiration

Gladstone merits the esteem and admiration of all liberty-loving people the world over for his wisdom and manily courage in proposing two measures recently presented by him for consideration in the British parliament, and popularly known as the Home Rule bill and the Irish Land bill.

Second—That long—delayed justice to Ireland, that the most pressing dictates of a sound policy, that an enlightened statesmanship of the highest order, and the progressive spirit of the age, all demand that some such steps should be taken.

Third—That in our opinion an early passage of said bills will tend to allay, if not entirely remove, the feelings of hostility which have already existed too long between Ireland and England; will inspire each with a more hearty good will for the other and greatly promote the lasting happiness, welfare and prosperity of both without detracting, in the slightest degree, from the strength, ing.in the slightest degree, from the strength, dignity or unity of the empire.
Fourth—That the self-restraint of the Irish people during the whole course of the pres-ent great struggle for national justice; their submission under the trying test of English coercion to the stern discipline of a cool and sagacious leadership give to the world the strongest possible guarantee that Ireland, ruled by the wisdom and genius of her own statesmanship will enter upon that career of prosperity and achievement of which the American people believe her in the highest degree capable.

Fifth—That if said bill should ultimately fail of ena tuent, we fear the spirit of discontent, which prevails among the people of Ireland, receiving a new impetus from such a sore disappointment, will assume such form as to postpone for many years, if not blast for all time to come, those cheering prospects of peace, concord and reconciliation, which now seem so nearly at hand.

Sixth—That we most heartily congratulate the gallant Charles Stewart Parnell and his brave compatriots on the wonderful progress that has attended their unequalled efforts to neipate Ireland from penury, misrule

Mr. J. T. Moriarty explained at length the tenor of the resolutions and warmly urged their adoption. Greatest praise is due, he said, to the men who have accomplished so much in the face of such formidable opposition.

Judge Thurston was then called for and delivered an able and eloquent ad-dress upon the question. He considered it of the greatest importance that the real, deliberate judgment of the American people should be clearly expressed upon this question that involves the happiness and prosperity of Ireland. The American people have watched England's treatment of Ireland and, without prejudice, pronounce it unjust, unwise and feel that it must be changed. Much of England's prestige as a nation is due to the valor of the Irish soldiery who have fought under the English flag. The Irish people have dearly earned their liberty, and should have it. He prophesied that the time is not far distant when England, Ireland and Scotland, liberalized and grown strong, will establish a people's government, embracing all England. The revolutions of the future will be political revolutions. Charles Stewert Parnell, through years of struggle and darkness has persistently organized a political force that demands justice to Ireland and her people. Heroism of statesmanship has accomplished what heroism of arms never could have secured for Ireland. The hearts of her people should swell up with gratitude to the men who have accomplished these results. The address thoughout was logical and masterly.

Mr. E. Rosewater was called for and delivered a brief, pointed address. He said he was heartily in sympathy with the plan to have Irishmen govern Ireland. Mr. Gladstone, at the close of his career, in championing the cause of Ire-land against all odds, against all England almost, deserves the admiration of all mankind. His plan will furnish a peaceful solution of the problem of home rule for Ireland. He said he believed the time is coming when Mr. Gladstone's re-form bill will be the key note of a system of government, which will prevail all over Europe.

At the close of Mr. Rosewater's remarks the resolutions were unanimously marks the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The following letter of regret was read from Mayor Boyd:

Hon, J. A. Meshane, President of the National League—My Dear Sir: While I can not be with you in person, I am with you in support of Mr. Gladstone in his efforts to give the people of Ireland the right to make their own laws and an opportunity to become what nature designed them to be—freemen. He is entitled to and should receive the cordial and influential support of Irishmen syerywhere, scattered though they be all over the civilized world. The measures as prepared by Mr. Gladstone may not be all that is desired, still they are a step in the right direction, and I hope they will pass parliament and become a law. Kespectfully,

JAMES E. BOYD, Mayor.

After passing a vote of thanks to the speakers who had delivered addresses, the meeting adjourned to meet at 3 o'clock on Sunday, May 23.

CABLEGRAM OF CONGRATULATIONS.

Cablegram of congratulations.

The following cablegram was sent by the president of the league last evening:
To the Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone and Chas.
Stewart Parnell, London—The people of Omaba, this day in grand mass meeting assembled, without distinction as to nationality, have passed resolutions endorsing the heroic efforts being made by you both in behalf of home rule for Ireland, and expressing the hope that the bill recently presented to parliament with that end in view will be speedily passed, and thus lay the foundation for the more lasting happiness, welfare and prespective of both Ireland and England without detracting in the slightest degree from the strength, dignity or unity of the empire.

Stray Leaves From the Reporter's

Note Book.
"There'll be a death to-day," said an old time undertaker, a few days ago. "Just as I was locking up the store last night a big coffin in the corner snapped and cracked two or three times. This is a sure sign. That coffin will have an occupant in less than twenty-four hours. You needn't laugh, we are not the only people who are superstitious. Base ball players are worse than we are. One of the U. P. nine told me he knew they were going to be defeated at St. Joseph because he saw a cross-eyed woman just as he was entering the ball park."

"There is no other jail in the country." said a prisoner, who spoke from experience, "where one man handles as many many prisoners without any assistance at all as Joe Miller does here. There are about eighty of us here, with five insane prisoners, but he manages to keep good care and watch of us all day and night, and single handed at that."

"The streets of this city after midnight, now, are generally as quiet as the grave.' He was an old time policeman who had seen the days not long since when the nightly thoroughfares were pregnant with sin and shame. "Those were good times for the saloons and houses of infamy, but they were sad ones for many a tireside from which some favored son nightly wandered. Those nights brought fortunes to the resorts of eastern Omaha, while they brought want to the pocket of many a young clerk. There is scarce-ly one of them now left, but then there was many a good boy in the employ of the Union Pacific who lost both rest and reputation, as he also lost his money. I remember about ten of them. They generally started out together, but returned home not upon their shields, but frequently upon little things looking like frequently upon little things looking like shingles. They were jolly, liyely fellows, and never more jolly than after they had gone the rounds of 'drinks for the party,' until the party found itself in a condition familiarly styled intoxicated. When the month's salary was gone, they visited their 'uncle', 'negotiated' with their friends, 'stood off' the tailor, 'cheeked the landiady, 'ticketed' the wash bill and 'hypothecated' with the janitor, Monday hypothecated' with the janitor. Monday they were generally 'broke up', the rest of the week ditto. How they ever managed to draw the blinds over the mag-nates' eyes at headquarters, I don't, understand, unless the 'wealth' which the fathers of the young scape-graces possessed had some magical quality. Peace to them wherever they are. "There are western customs which I like and western customs which I don't like," remarked a theatrical man yesterday at the Millard. "I've been here frequently during the past five years, and have invariably watched your funerals. By the by, there goes one now," said the speaker, looking from the waiting room to the street: "See there, just what I was about to tell you. There's the undertaker. He's just at the head of the funeral. You see, he's shivering, but he'll stand it. He has a modest, semi-sorrowful, semi-resigned east of countenance as if he were really leading the funeral of his sweetheart. And yet I'll wager a farm he no more about about deceased behind him than cares no I do about the average customer in whom I pretend to be most absorbingly interested. If he might do so, that undertaker who has just passed would assume a east of features as practical and pleasant as a man who has made a sale. But he dare not do so. It would scandalize the people, and I suppose he would never get another job—from the friends of the deceased. Of what use is he, at the head deceased. Of what use is he, at the head of a funeral. He isn't ornamental, neither is he useful. On a cold day he freezes everybody who can't stand a freezing temperature for two or three freezing temperature freezing tempe freezing temperature for two or three hours. In hot weather he roasts all who are not by nature intended for and so equipped for an inferno. In the east we take care of our funerals ourselves. The average family would deem it almost profanation to have a hireling attend a friend after death. Surviving friends re-serve that duty for themselves, and the thought of kindred or loved one paying to those departed the last tribute of ap preciation and love is edifying and con-soling to the bereaved heart. The under-taker, as a marshal, ought to be retired. He knows he holds place only through sufferance and diffidence and not infre-quently is he admonished to drive behind There are some knights of the dismal business of death who would go out of the business if they could not in this manner either advertise or display them-selves. There are some undertakers, too, who are mortified each time they have to put themselves before a captious

CATHOLIC COLONIZATION.

The Society will Meet in Chicago Next Wednesday-A Good Showing. The Irish Catholic Colonization association will hold its annual meeting next Wednesday at the Palmer house in Chi-cago, when six directors will be elected in the place of Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop

O'Connor of Omaha, the Rev. Jame McGolrick of Minneapolis, P. V. Hickey of the Catholic Review, W. J. Quan and Michael Cudahy of Chicago, and John Boyle O'Reilly of the Boston Pilot. About $30,000 worth of the stock of the association has been already redeemed, and some $3,000 more has been donated as a basis for a permanent colonization fund. About onehalf the outstanding stock will be called in the present year and the remainder the next year. Shareholders who desire to realize on their stock can have the par value and 6 per cent interest compounded from date of certificate, less amount of dividends paid on the same.

From this showing it will be seen that the association has been exceedingly suc-cessful. Several hundred Catholic famessau. Several numered Cathone families have been planted by it on farms in Minnesota and Nebraska. All are prospering and contented. Many of them were rescued from the slums. Others were "taken up" immediately after their arrival from the old country. old country. After the redemption of the outstanding shares the residue will probably be disposed of in accordance with the following resolution, which will be presented at the meeting of Wednesday. Resolved. That any assets which may remain after redeeming the stock and paying off the liabilities of the association be set aside and made the nucleus of a "permanent colonization fund," to which said fund all donations of stock will be applied.

When he was too intoxicated to make resistence, as Hodgin claims, they went through him ane took his revolver and $7 or $8 in money. Morris and Smith both deny the charge, and say that the revolver was given to them by Hodgin to secure a loan of $2. They deny taking any money from him. The accused were Millions of Women Wear Trousers From a lecture by Dr. Mary Walker: Corsets are little things, and they don't look very dangerous, but they deform the body and break down the health of the wearer, even though they are not very tight. Then the weight of a woman's multitudinous clothes. Just think of it. Why, if men had to carry about with them such a weight they would never be able to get through with over half their business. Now, what are we to conclude will be the future of our republic if there win be the lattire of our replicate it there is not a radical change in woman's dress? If the mothers are not physically and morally strong, what will the sons and daughters be? What is dress for? Is it merely for show, or is it for protection to the body? I think it is the latter.

There are three times as many women in the world who wear pants as there are men and women together in the United States and England. Look at China with her millions. They have had one fashion for years. It is comfortable, they realize that it is healthful, and they stick to it.

The common sense dress of the men of our land is about all that could be desired for women. It is light, and is not con stantly pulling down, like a ton of lead, and it is a real protection to the body. But women say if we wear men's clothes, everybody will ridicule us, and we will even be liable to insult and arrest by policemen, who do not fully un-derstand the law. Well, suppose you are ridiculed a little. The early Christians were laughed at, and even persecuted to the death. Not more than 100 years ago, in London, a man or woman who carried an umbrella was hooted at,

and followed by a mob of men and boys.

Now, I would not think it any particular favor if half the men in the United have had men, intelligent and wealthy men, come to me and say: "Dr. Walker, I respect you; I respect your intellect and your good sense, and I believe if you only dressed like other women I would love you and ask you to be my wife." Well, do you know what I told them? I said: There are plenty of women in the world who dress just as you want them to: go and marry them." I don't want any man to marry me for my clothes, or because, when I am dressed up I look well. If I am married it must be from the highest motives.
